THE South-Carolina Gazette.

From MONDAY May 13th, to MONDAY May 20th, 1751.

PARIS A-LA MAIN, January 11.

WE hear from Lisbon, that the king of Portugal has formed a design to abolish the tribunal of the inquisition in his dominions, in which undertaking every Frenchman, and we hope every true christian, in all nations, heartily wishes him success.

There is no reason to be surprized that Marshal Saxe was able to expend such vast sums as he did at Chambord, when it is known that he drew more than twenty millions out of Flanders. Chambord was a sort of separate monarchy; every thing there was subject to the marshal, and in such degree as never had been known in France: Pleasures were carried to the highest pitch: The troops which were there, observed the most exact discipline, and good order eminently prevailed; but continence was a stranger to that abode. The ambition of this great man even surpassed his expences. His projects, we are assured, being amazingly great; he was importunate to obtain the dutchy of Courland, in order to procure his being made Czar of Muscovy; which title and power he wanted, that he might have destroyed the Ottoman empire, and had his monument erected in St. Sophia in Constantinople. These designs were known to some few before his death; but since then, have been more generally talked of. The death of Count Saxe is thought to be an event which will greatly contribute to establish the tranquillity of the North, seeing his pretensions to Courland would, in all probability, sooner or later, have caused troubles there.

Naples, Jan. 9. His majesty has given strict charge to the criminal court not to dispatch any affairs for the future in favour of the ecclesiasticks, so as to facilitate to them the addition of the estates they might obtain.

Paris, Jan. 30. The delivery of the Queen of the Two Sicilies of a prince, which happened on the 12th instant, at nine o'clock at night, was notified at Versailles the 24th, which gave great joy at court; and was followed two days after by the notification of the birth of a prince of Parma, on the 20th, at eight in the evening.

Leghorn, Jan. 12. We have receiv'd advice, that there has been a violent earthquake in the island of St. Vincent in the Brazils, by which the town of Santos, and part of the fortress of St. Vincent, were destroy'd.

Cadiz, Jan. 4. We have receiv'd advice, that three men of war cruising off the Canaries, having taken two Barbary Corsairs, which had on board 377 men, 68 pieces of cannon, and 90,000 piastres, the produce of their prizes.

Vienna, Jan. 2. The deputies arrived here from the kingdom of Bohemia have had their audience of the empress queen; 'tis said, they are charged with a most important commission, but at present we know not the subject matter of it.

The commission appointed to re-unite the bannat of Tamesvaer to the kingdom of Hungary, continues its session with great success; and 'tis not doubted but that affair will soon be brought to a conclusion. Count Podewils, who resided at this court as envoy extraordinary from the king of Prussia, together with his consort the countess, are set out on their return to Berlin. Before his departure the emperor presented him with a diamond ring, worth about nine or ten thousand florins. The empress queen also presented to the countess several jewels of great value. Their excellencies during their residence here gain'd greatly the favour of the court, and were highly esteemed by all persons of distinction.

Schramberg in the Black Forest, Jan. 26. This town is entirely reduced to ashes by a fire, which began in the house of one of our magistrates, who himself perished in the flames.

Paris, Jan. 25. The number of christenings in the year 1750, in this city, amounts to 19,035, that of marriages to 4,619, burials to 18,084, and the number of foundling children to 3,835; so that the number of christenings this year exceeds that of the burials 951.

Hague, Jan. 31. According to our accounts from Alsace, not only all the German regiments in the French service are assembled there, but also most of the Swiss regiments, and all the principal towns are fill'd with one or other of them. They are assembled there, in order that they may be ready to receive their recruits and horses. Our letters also mention the march of some regiments to Alsace from Flanders, and it is computed, that by March or April next above 30,000 men will be assembled on the left of the Rhine, ready to execute whatever orders shall be given them.

Genoa, January 29. The pope has granted his permission that a tax of one and a half per cent. be laid upon all the revenues of the clergy throughout the territories of this republick, to be applied towards the re-establishment of the bank of St. George.

Copenhagen, Feb. 6. The king has given orders for the equipping of two frigats of war of thirty guns each, which are to be sent into the mediterranean, in order to cruize on the corsairs of Barbary, who have lately began to interrupt the commerce of the subjects of this kingdom.

Vienna, Feb. 7. Publick prayers are ordered to be put up in all the churches of this city, for the happy delivery of her Imperial majesty. 'Tis said the differences with the republick of Venice, concerning the patriarchate of Aquileja, are at length amicably adjusted.

Dresden, Feb. 7. Marshal Lowendahl arrived here from Paris on thursday last, and the next day had a private audience of the king.

Paris a-la-main, Feb. 15. A bridge is intended to be built over the Seine, opposite the military school which is going to be erected there.

As it appears by the preamble of the edict for establishing the said military school, that the king is desirous his officers should be better versed in the art of war, the chevalier de Lussan has begun at his own house, with his majesty's permission, a course of public lectures on tracticks.

It having been customary in all general assemblies of the clergy of this kingdom, to draw up a varbal process, or journal, of their proceedings, and also an act of their separation; and the last assembly having broke up without observing those formalities, the prelates, we are assured, will meet in a few days to supply that omission; and many are of opinion that the affair which occasioned the sudden dissolution of the assembly, will then be brought on the tapis again.

Amsterdam, Feb. 1. Most of our letters from Germany intimate, that we are at the eve of a rupture between the court of Petersbourg and the king of Prussia: But this news must certainly come from people, who either wish for war, or are not perfectly acquainted with the circumstances of the misunderstanding between the two crowns. Russia will scarcely declare war against the Prussians, without having stronger reasons than have yet appeared; and the king of Prussia is too politick to strike the first blow; for then the Casus Fœderis would not exist with France, Denmark, or Sweden? and the discussion which this affair will require, would swallow up so much time, that the Russians would over-run the kingdom of Prussia before the allies of his Prussian majesty could be in a condition of causing the first squadron to march up to his assistance. It's certain that Denmark would not stir first, and tho' France has plenty of troops in Lorrain and Alsace, what a march must they not have, before arriving upon the frontiers of Poland? besides, some time will be spent in the king of Prussia's asking leave for these troops to pass through the territories of certain princes, &c. for without that he would be creating to himself many enemies.

Extract of a private Letter from Paris, dated Jan. 26.

'Whilst the publick is engaged in attentively observing the extraordinary cares which the ministry takes to improve the naval forces of the kingdom, scarce any attention is given to those which are taken for augmenting the land forces, and for keeping use of them with efficacy upon any sudden occasion. All the old and incapable soldiers are disbanded, and their places are supplied by young vigorous fellows. The affair of the renewal of the antient treaty with the Swiss cantons is going on with success; and it is assured, that it is in part for this purpose, that the king takes such extraordinary measures for raising money.'

LONDON, January 26.

By letters from France we are assured, that ten men of war of the line will be launched in the spring, and that their marine is intended to be augmented to what it was in the reign of Lewis XIV. it having since that time been lessened every year, by a different turn of politicks.

There will be an augmentation in the navy for the year 1751, of some thousands of sailors.

LONDON, January 29.

Yesterday the Right Hon. John Lord St. John of Bletsoe took the oaths and his seat in the house of peers.

As did also the Right Rev. lord bishop of Bristol.

The next heirs to the lord Forbes of Pitsligo, who was concerned in the late rebellion, are applying to parliament for a confirmation of a decree of the lords of session in Scotland, which was in their favour, in order to recover to that family the forfeited estate.

LONDON, February 12.

They write from Revel, that a squadron of twelve men of war will sail from that Port as soon as ever the weather will permit them to get out: For which (on the other side) the Swedes only wait, to send a reinforcement of troops to Finland.

By the Holland mail arrived this morning we have an account from Madrid, that his Catholick majesty, finding it often alledged, that his own subjects were the principal cause of the illicit trade so fatal to the peace he is desirous of maintaining with the British nation, has issued an ordinance, whereby any person in his dominions, that shall for the future be detected in a contraband commerce with the English, is to suffer death, and have all his estate and effects confiscated.

They write from the Hague, that the prince stadtholder will make a tour to Zealand the beginning of next month.
